Scholarship Winners Are Announced by Club

The Women's College Club of Princeton has announced the names of seniors from the four Princeton secondary schools whom the club is honoring with scholarships. The students were chosen on the basis of academics and extracurricular activities. The awards this year total more than $10,000.

The recipients and the colleges they will attend include, from The Hun School, Heather Bell, Dartmouth College, and Erica McDonald, Boston College; from Princeton Day School, Eun Sook Bae, New York University, Marina Gershman, Bucknell University, and Marika Sardar, Rice University;

Also, from Princeton High School, Maya Vaughan-Smith, Rutgers University, Claudia Woloshin, New York University, and Anne Stowell, who received the Harriet P. Peterson Book Award, Brown University; and from Stuart Country Day School, Kathryn Calogredes, Lehigh University, and Bernadette Deloatch, Cornell University.

A tea was held at the home of Mary Hoffman to honor these scholarship recipients.

It is with great pleasure and pride that I announce the Florence Bell Hillier Prize winner for 1994, Alice Anne Perlowski. Alice is a senior at The Hun School and has been accepted at Cornell University where she plans to fulfill her love of science with a concentrated study of Biology. She eventually hopes to become a pre-med student. Alice has a special sense of being and of giving. Like Florence Hillier, Alice is an energetic, outgoing person who has been appointed to numerous leadership positions. Last year she achieved the ranking of first in her class and has held that position ever since. And yet her philosophy has been that one should try to be as well rounded as possible and should give every aspect of school life a try. She has maintained an extremely full schedule consisting of community service commitments, athletics, music and other extra curricular activities. In swimming she has attained the position of captain during her junior and senior years. Alice is captain of The Hun crew team which has attained county, state and national titles. They were invited to and rowed in the Henley Royal Regatta in the United Kingdom. Alice has a real interest in the Fine Arts and played flute and piccolo in orchestras since 1990. The scholarship committee was looking for someone who had the special qualities of Florence Hillier - Entrepreneurship, intelligence, artistic talent and last but not least , humor. We were delighted to discover that among Alice's hobbies was comedy. Her love of a "good joke" has inspired her to take up writing and performing stand-up comedy to anyone who will listen.

We thank the Hillier family for continuing Florence's belief in helping others. We believe that this is part of Alice's creed also. I would now like to introduce to all of you the 1994 Florence Bell Hillier Prize Winner.

Marcia Powell, Barbara Hillier, Alice Perlowski, Dr. Hillier and Mary Hoffman

The Women's College Club of Princeton has awarded the second annual Florence Bell Hillier Prize to Alice Perlowski, a senior at The Hun School. The award consists of a check and an engraved silver bowl, which was presented by Dr. James Hillier, husband of the late Mrs. Hillier, and his daughter-in-law Barbara, wife of J. Robert Hillier, founding principal of The Hillier Group, Architects.

Ms. Perlowski, who is from Flemington, is both a scholar and an athlete. She has ranked first in her class scholastically for the past two years and last year received the Wellesley Book Award, presented to a junior who displays academic excellence. A crew team member (she is this year's captain) and accomplished swimmer, she has competed in both breast stroke and freestyle events on the state level and was captain of her swim team and winner of an MVP award last year. She expects to attend Cornell in the fall.

The Women's College Club of Princeton will celebrate its annual spring luncheon with a "Yesterday/Today" fashion show on Monday at Scanticon, beginning at 11. Fashions of the past, featuring authentic period costumes will be provided by Laura Elgin of Lambertville. Talbot's of Princeton will also provide clothing.

Members of long standing will be honored. Mary James will furnish the music. The public is invited to attend. For information and reservations, call the chairman of the luncheon, Luna Kayser, at 987-8755.

The club, begun in 1916, has a long tradition of serving the community. Its primary goal is to award college scholarships to girls attending area high schools. In the past few years, the club has been able to award $10,000 in scholarships annually, raised through a variety of activities. The 1994 scholarship recipients will be announced at the luncheon.

In 1935, the club developed lecture courses presented by many Princeton University professors, with subjects ranging from world politics to modern art. This was the forerunner of the present Adult School in Princeton. The club's college guidance seminars at Princeton High School preceded the extensive college guidance programs of today.

Today, the club provides interest groups, bridge groups, investment study groups and trips, as well as a monthly program. For information regarding membership, call Alice H. Baionno at (908) 297-3272.

The Women's College Club of Princeton will celebrate their annual spring luncheon with a "Yesterday/Today" fashion show on Monday, May 16, 1994 at Scanticon. Hospitality will begin at 11:00 am and the luncheon at 12 noon. In a parade of interesting historical developments, fashions of the past featuring authentic period costumes will be provided by Laura Elgin of Lambertville. Talbots of Princeton will alternate with models wearing their modern but always classic and very wearable clothes. It is interesting to note that the costumes of the past required seven club members who wear sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 to be models. Times and sizes have changed. Members of long standing will be honored as representatives of different decades of faithful membership. Mary James will furnish the music. The public is cordially invited to attend. ## PU professor studies the birds and the bees

By Laurie Lynn Strasser
Staff Writer

James Gould could teach even Casanova a thing or two about the birds and the bees.

Dr. Gould, a professor of ecology and evolutionary biology at Princeton University, specializes in animal learning and mating habits. One might call him a sex education teacher of sorts.

The Herrontown Circle resident routinely makes statements like: "Rape is possible in birds, but it is very, very difficult because of all those feathers," and "Even flies learn. They learn better if you cut their heads off first."

Dr. Gould, who will answer the question, "What can we learn from the animals?" at All Saints Parish Hall in Princeton on April 19 at 8 p.m., has co-authored five books on animal behavior with his wife, Carol Grant Gould.

He admits he had little interest in nature during his boyhood in Tulsa, Okla., but that attitude changed when he was a junior studying molecular biology at Cal Tech in the late 1960s.

His professor refuted a theory that bees dance to communicate the distance to nectar, and challenged the class to devise experiments proving whether the bees are attracted by smell instead. The young Gould's design was best, and he received funding to try it over the summer.

"The trick was to get bees to lie about where they'd been," he said. "They must understand the language to understand the lie."

He made the bees dance in a false direction, so the others were misled into flying to the wrong spot. If they had been drawn by odor, they would have wound up in the right place, he said.

Now 47, with a doctorate from Rockefeller University, Dr. Gould has come full circle. This summer, his students will have a chance to study bee learning through a test hive at the university's Stony Ford field station off Pretty Brook Road.

When a bee dances, he said, it repeatedly flexes its wing muscles, creating vibrations that other bees pick up with their antennae. The amount of buzzing correlates with the distance to the flower, and the direction of the dance relates to the flower's orientation, he said.

"Bees communicate on an order of magnitude far beyond anything else with six legs and a crunchy body," he said. "The only more complicated communication system in terms of the amount of information conveyed per time unit is ours."

Human communication resembles that between bees in two ways, Dr. Gould said.

Firstly, honey bees, like people, speak different dialects. If a German honey bee tells his buddies that food is 5 meters away, an Egyptian bee would buzz the same number of times to indicate it is 50 meters away, he said.

In addition, he said, people, like bees, are equipped at birth with a program for language.

"Even the dumbest people learn language," he said. "You can't stop a child from learning language. We're innately driven to do it."

Humans and bees may find common ground where communication is concerned, but certainly not when it comes to reproduction. When a male honey bee mounts the queen, his genitals detach, his guts spill from his abdomen and he falls away, dying, Dr. Gould said.

After coupling with some 10 drones, the queen will live for years, but never mate again. "She's got all the sperm she'll ever need," he said.

Bees aren't the only flying fauna to catch the naturalist's attention. To him, birds' dawn twitter is more than just a reason to jam a pillow over his ears.

The Women's College Club of Princeton has presented Katherine L. Bertone of Pennington with the first annual Florence Bell Hillier Prize. The cash prize, established from donations received by the Women's College Club upon the death of Florence B. Hillier last year, was supplemented with an engraved silver bowl presented by J. Robert Hillier, Chief Executive Officer and Chairman of the Board of The Hillier Group and his father, Dr. James Hillier.

The award honors the memory of Florence B. Hillier who was a member of the Women's College Club of Princeton for many years. The prize is awarded to a young woman who exemplifies the entrepreneurship, intelligence, artistic talent, and humor that were the hallmarks of Mrs. Hillier's life.

A graduate of The Hun School, ranking first in her class, Katherine L. Bertone plans to enter Harvard University in September.

The Women's College Club of Princeton will have a brief ceremony introducing the winner of the first Florence Bell Hillier Award. Her son, J. Robert Hillier, will present the scholarship recipient with an engraved silver bowl. Dr. James Hillier will attend.

The ceremony will take place on Monday, May 17, at 11:30 at Scanticon. A spring luncheon and fashion show will follow at noon, with fashions by Merrick's on Moore. Cash bar will open at 11 a.m. Reservations must be made in advance.

Mrs. Hillier belonged to the Women's College Club of Princeton for decades and was highly interested in scholarships for college students in the Princeton area.

The Women's College Club of Princeton will meet on Monday at 1:30 p.m. at All Saints' Parish Hall. Lois Marie Harrod will speak about her book, Chosen Works.

Ms. Harrod, author of Every Twinge a Verdict and Crazy Alice, is a teacher of English and expository creative writing at Voorhees High School in Hunterdon County, and a teacher during summers at the Governor's School of the Arts at Trenton State College. She is a 1991 recipient of the Princeton University Prize for Distinguished Secondary Teachers. In 1992, she received a fellowship from the New Jersey State Council of the Arts for her poetry.

Her poems have appeared in many journals, including Carolina Quarterly, Shenandoah, The American Pen, Literary Review, Green Mountains Review, Poet Lore and Zone Three. Forthcoming poems will be in American Poetry Review.

Refreshments will be served and guests are invited.

In a college town or in almost any town, there's always a place for hostesses and cooks: church functions, faculty/wives teas, school receptions, and club affairs.

All these social events from morning coffees and brunches through afternoon teas, dessert bridge parties and cocktail hours call for a variety of foods created by loving and able hands.

Midday Magic was created by the Women's College Club of Princeton to help all our favorite kitchen denizens with new ideas and techniques. Members who contributed recipes had many other things in mind, too, with health-conscious low fat items, garnishing ideas, and family favorites.

The committee in charge tried out many of our ideas at a club meeting; we found that our friends enjoyed both the learning and tasting aspects of Midday Magic. We hope you do, too!

FALL LUNCHEON

Monday, September 21, 1992, 12:00, at ALL SAINTS

You are cordially invited to attend our opening meeting of the 1992-93 club year. We will be honoring the memory of Mrs. Harriet P. Peterson, the founder of the Annual Book Award made in her name. We have invited members of her family to attend the luncheon so that we may celebrate with them Mrs. Peterson's continuing contribution to the Princeton community as channeled through the Women's College Club, whose ideals she has so generously supported.

As our luncheon entertainment, we are welcoming a new arrival to the Princeton area from Houston, Texas, the solo harpist, Georganne Cassat. Dr. Cassat has won prizes at International harp competitions in Israel and on the Isle of Man, and was harpist in residence at the University of Iowa from 1983 to 1988. She is planning for an active performance schedule here and you will be among the first to hear her locally.

Georganne Cassat D'Angelo

On Monday at noon at All Saints' Church, The Women's College Club will open its fall luncheon series. The meeting will honor the memory of Harriet P. Peterson, founder of the annual book award made in her name.

Georganne Cassat, prominent harpist, will play. Dr. Cassat won prizes at the international harp competitions in Israel and the Isle of Man, produced her first CD recording through a National Endowment of the Arts solo recitalist fellowship, performed under the late Leonard Bernstein, and worked with Zubin Mehta.

Call Mary Hoffman, hospitality chairman, 896-0280, for reservations. Cost is $5 per person.

Benefit Bridge Party A Success for 25th Year

To the Editor of Town Topics:

The Women's College Club of Princeton held its silver anniversary scholarship bridge benefit on March 18, paying tribute to Mrs. Dorothea Sjostrom, president of the club from 1967-1969, who started the benefit — putting into practice the theory that if you have to raise funds for a worthy cause, you might as well have a good time (and vice versa). This year, once again, proved the worthiness of that concept.

Our heartfelt thanks go to the members of the business community who showed their interest in scholarships for women by contributing prizes. The following have won not only our gratitude but our ongoing patronage: Boutonniere by Guy, Bowhe & Peare, Forest Jewelers, Forsgate Country Club, Ernst & Young, H. Gross & Company, Historic Hopewell House, Hyatt Regency - Princeton, Jolie & Victor Hair Salon, Jordan's, Judy's Flower Shop, Kale's Garden Center, Macy's, Peterson's Nursery, Princeton Marriott, Sealfons, The Alchemist & Barrister, The Flower Basket and The Rocky Hill Inn.

The Scholarship Committee is already interviewing candidates for this June's awards, but we urge all prospective graduates from Princeton secondary (public and private) schools to consider their future eligibility, based on need, for a Women's College Club scholarship. Interest-free loans are also available to women for graduate work.

Inquiries may be addressed to the Women's College Club of Princeton, Box 0263, Kingston 08528.

Thank you for supporting us.

College women

On Monday, Oct. 16, the Women's College Club of Princeton is holding a birthday party at the meeting room of All Saints Church off Van Dyke Road, as a tribute to the Princeton Adult School, which is celebrating its 50th year of service to the community.

An expert panel of Adult School past presidents and present board members (alphabetically: Mary Jane Fleming, Hanna Kahn, Anne B. Shepherd, and John A. Winterbottom) will offer a panoramic view of the school's activities; pertinent (if not impertinent) questions will be fielded from the audience. The president and executive vice-president of the Adult School (Clair Jacobus and Aggi Szilagyi) will give opening and closing remarks.

The Women's College Club considers Oct. 16 a good opportunity to demonstrate appreciation for a Princeton institution and the people who run it. All those interested in the trials, tribulations and joys of supplying the public's educational needs are invited for an evening of conversation, birthday cake, and decaffeinated coffee.

LIVING WITH ORCHIDS

Now that the leaves are littering the lawn and the deer are chomping on the chrysanthemums, perhaps it's time to think of beautifying the "indoors". Our next guest, Joan Rosenfeld of "Exclusively Orchids", a thriving business sprouted from a hobby, will describe how orchids came to be an integral part of her life, and what is happening in the field of orchidaceous horticulture (I couldn't resist that - try saying it three times in a row). Mrs. Rosenfeld firmly believes that anyone can successfully raise an orchid as a houseplant, and her talk will include specific instructions. To tempt the interested and convince even the most inveterate black-thumb, All Saints will be the scene of a display of orchids in bloom that afternoon. THE PUBLIC IS INVITED TO ATTEND.

College Club

Stevan Harned will give a program of Baroque and Renaissance music on the recorder at the Sept. 19 meeting of the Women's College Club of Princeton, which will take place at All Saints' Church at 1:30 p.m.

A native of Hungary and citizen of Canada, Mr. Harnad has pursued mastery of the French Horn and alto recorder at Trenton State College and the Mannes School of Music. He has performed with various orchestras, including the Princeton University Orchestra. He is in the process of founding a local Baroque ensemble of professional and professional-level musicians.

In addition to his musical activities, Mr. Harned has studied psychology at McGill and Princeton universities, and is editor of the journal "Behavioral and Brain Sciences."

The Women's College Club is open to graduates of four-year accrediited colleges and universities. The group supports higher education by offering scholarships each year to young women from Princeotn secondary schools bound for college and maintains an educational loan fund.

November 18, 1988

Shirley Lord will speak about her experiences as a U.S. Corps volunteer in Thailand to the Women's College Club of Princeton on Monday, Nov. 21, at All Saints' Church at 1:30 p.m.

A teacher for two years in the TEFL program for secondary schools, Ms. Lord found her experience to be non-partisan, an intercultural exchange between people of two different countries at the grass roots level.

There will be a presentation of slides, including some taken by Marcia and Bill Powell when they visited the speaker at her school in the central agricultural area of Thailand.

Authoress to address Women's College Club

Frances Wright Saunders, author of the biography of Ellen Axon Wilson, the first wife of Woodrow Wilson, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Women's College Club of Princeton at 1:30 p.m. Sept. 15 at All Saints' Church.

Mrs. Saunders' biography, which was published by the University of North Carolina Press in 1985, recognizes Ellen Wilson as an extraordinarily gifted woman, ahead of her time, and yet compatible with her age. Intelligent, talented and loving, she was influential in the decisions of her husband, in both his academic and political careers. Twenty-three of her 54 years were spent in Princeton.

Mrs. Saunders, one of James Madison University's most distinguished alumnae, received a Master of Arts in English Literature from the University of Colorado at Boulder, and is the author of numerous publications. She will be happy to autograph copies of her book after the program.

Members who would like to have lunch with Mrs. Saunders at the Nassau Club at noon prior to the meeting, may call Eleanor Pennington.

College Club keeps pace as members' needs change

By Maria LoBiondo
Assistant Lifestyle Editor

The buzz word of the '80s, "networking," is nothing knew to the members of the Women's College Club of Princeton. They've been busy networking for the past 70 years.

The club, second only to the Present Day Club in age, allows women graduates of four-year accredited colleges the chance to meet, keep their intellectual batteries charged and increase their ranks — by offering scholarships and loans to future female grads.

"We're 70 years young," emphasizes Marcia Powell, the current president, who presides over the more than 300 members representing 163 colleges and universities worldwide. Members in the Princeton group come from as far away as Flemington and Bucks County, in addition to members such as Edith Martin, Dorothy Donahue, Tita Vivian and Jane Carpenter who live here in the club's hometown.

Of course, not all 318 members turn up for every meeting. There are those who can make the monthly afternoon meetings, some who hold out for the two evening meetings each year, and others who keep in touch through the several interest groups the club organizes.

In this way the club keeps pace with the varied nature of its members — homemakers, professionals and "volunteer professionals," as member Eleanor Pennington put it.

"IT'S A NICE WAY to get acquainted," added Evelyn Barrow, who moved to Princeton recently from Syracuse, N.Y. Her comment at the November meeting was seconded by Diane Hill, who was a member of a college club in Tokyo before moving here, and Lucinda Mezey, who has lived locally for 10 years but joined the club recently at a friend's invitation.

The November meeting featured Ingrid Reed, assistant dean at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. A dozen or so members met with Ms. Reed at lunch at the Nassau Club before her talk. Then the group moved to All Saints' Church where most meetings are held (and where the club's china and silver tea service is kept) for Ms. Reed's presentation on her recent trip to India, the Phillipines, Indonesia and Singapore.

TRAVEL TOPICS are popular with club members, and often will entice members' husbands to attend evening meetings, according to Mrs. Vivian. However, the range of subjects covered is much broader. Topics in in 1985 included "The Important Role of Micronutrients in Cancer, Aging and Optimal Performance" (by Dr. Carl Pfeiffer of the Princeton Brain Bio Center), "Bringing History to Life: New Trends in Museum Interpretation" (by Sara Cureton of the Historical Society of Princeton), and "The Making of a National Theater" (by Nagle Jackson of McCarter Theater).

In addition to the programs offered, several special interest groups get together regularly — to play bridge, swap craft and cooking tips or discuss recently read books. The club also organizes jaunts to art museum exhibits and theater shows.

THE OTHER SIDE of College Club activities is fundraising for its scholarship and loan programs. In the old days, members held events like selling sandwiches at Princeton University football games as a scholarship fundraiser.

One story longtime members enjoy telling is how an excess of sandwiches made for sale at a university reunion were dumped instead into a piggery farm — the piggery now being the site of the Medical Center at Princeton.

The club has come a long way since its initial scholarship campaign which netted $300. Members hope to raise $10,000 for this purpose next year. The biggest fundraiser is the benefit card party and raffle held in March.

The beneficiaries of the club's largesse are local women from Princeton's secondary schools, both public and private. Nine young women from Princeton High School, the Hun School and Stuart Country Day School shared $7,300 collected by members in 1985. The scholarships are given based on a student's financial need.

The revolving loan program offers interest-free financial assistance to women above the freshman level. This can be especially helpful to women who are returning to their studies after several years' break. In 1985, a new loan of $1,400 was granted, added to six loans outstanding, which totaled $6,000. As each woman repays her loan following graduation, the money becomes available for another student.

With its continuing interest in education, the Women's College Club plans to keep pace with the women who fill its ranks as it heads toward future birthdays.

Where silence is golden

The Silent Auction given by the Women's College Club at their annual benefit dessert card party provides financial aid to college-bound girls in Princeton's public and private schools. Planning for this year's event are (from left to right) Mrs. William Powell, president; Mrs. Glen Hemstock, auction co-chairman; Mrs. Jonas Bingeman, party co-chairman; and Mrs. Fred Bowers, auction co-chairman. The event will be held noon March 17 at Stuart Country Day School. Reservations are $25 per table or $6.25 per person and may be made with Mrs. John Leahy, 25 Nelson Ridge Road, Princeton.

Couple speaks on Japan

"Living and Working in Japan" will be the subject of an illustrated talk to be presented by Dr. and Mrs. William Brown at a meeting of the Women's College Club of Princeton at 1:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 17 at All Saints Church, Van Dyke Road.

The couple has spent most of the last 27 months in Tokyo where Dr. Brown, who has been a member of the scientific staff of the Squibb Institute for Medical Research since 1951, recently completed an assignment as director of research and development for Squibb Japan, Inc.

Mrs. Brown, a docent at the Princeton University Art Museum, has taken advantage of the opportunity to study Japanese art and culture. She was U.S. director of the American Research Center in Egypt, a consortium of universities and museums, when the office was located in Princeton in the 1970s.

Dr. Brown, whose contacts with Japan span 20 years, is currently scientific director of World Wide Licensing for Squibb. In coming months he and Mrs. Brown will be spending half their time in Tokyo where they have an apartment in Akasaka. They have traveled extensively in Japan, and participated in some interesting facets of Japanese life.

Western pair deals deftly with life in mysterious East

By Angela Delli Santi
Staff Writer

Some 27 months ago, William and Lily Brown got the shock of their lives.

Almost without warning, the Lawrenceville couple went from Renaults to rickshaws, from Calvin Kleins to kimonos. Once they got over the culture shock, however, their stay in Tokyo was delightful.

"Living in Japan is exciting, interesting, charming, frustrating, exhilarating. Sometimes all of these at once, sometimes in sequence," Mrs. Brown told 90 or so members of the Women's College Club of Princeton during a presentation Monday at All Saints Church here.

The Browns were transferred — and somewhat abruptly — transferred to Tokyo when Dr. Brown was sent there on a corporate assignment. A scientist with the Squibb Institute for Medical Research, he recently completed a two-year stint as director of research and development for Squibb Japan, Inc.

The couple's talk, "Living and Working in Japan," was a culmination of their experiences and discoveries. They plan to return to Japan next month, and will split their time about equally between Tokyo and Lawrenceville in coming months.

Finding themselves suddenly thrust into a new culture was difficult, they admitted. But, the language barrier — they spoke no Japanese when they arrived — proved the toughest obstacle.

Dr. Brown supervised about 60 Japanese workers, most of whom spoke no English. Conducting meetings was a challenge, to say the least, he explained.

"Here I was an illiterate Westerner," he said with a smile.

Dr. Brown said he communicated using a combination of "my survival Japanese, their survival English, sign language, body language and the written word."

The Japanese who "know" English usually cannot speak it, Mrs. Brown added. They can, however, read and write it. And the Browns are learning Japanese, taking weekly language lessons from a Tokyo school teacher.

> "Living in Japan is exciting, interesting, charming, frustrating, exhilarating. Sometimes all of these at once, sometimes in sequence."
> — Lily Brown

Besides the language barrier the Browns experienced other obstacles, the stuff of which amusing anecdotes are made.

When Mrs. Brown was forced to visit an ophthalmologist because she had gotten something in her eye, the nurse had having "quite a time" securing a light-proof bandage. She summoned the doctor, who remarked, "the trouble is, your eye is such a different shape."

Former residents of rural Princeton, the Browns also had to learn to accept the "horrendous" crowds and traffic constantly present in the world's most populous city.

Another hardship was that most streets have no names, Mrs. Brown related. Thus, it is common even for the natives to seek directions in areas of the city they are unfamiliar with. It was a bit frustrating, she added, when cab drivers asked them for directions.

Another cultural difference is the pressure placed on young Japanese school children. Education is very regimented, Mrs. Brown said, even during the early stages. Acceptance at a private elementary school assures a grade-schooler a place in a prominent university, she said.

"There are prekindergarten tutoring programs," she added.

As a result of the extreme pressure placed on children as young as 5, she said parents and educators have begun to worry that the students lack creativity. The students are efficient, she noted, but Japan has not captured a Nobel Prize since the 1940s.

To illustrate the Japanese philosophy of productivity and efficiency, Mr. Brown mentioned a particular Japanese saying: "The nail that sticks up will get hammered down," he translated.

Dodges to talk to College Club

"Lebanon - the Past and the Devastating Present" will be the subject of a talk to be presented by Mr. and Mrs. David S. Dodge at a meeting of the Women's College Club of Princeton on Monday, April 15, at 8 p.m. at All Saints' Church.

The eyes of the world are centered on the crises in Lebanon and the Dodges, who will illustrate their talk with slides, are particularly well qualified to discuss the situation there.

David Dodge was born in Beirut, Lebanon (then Beirut, Syria), where his father, Bayard Dodge, was president of the American University of Beirut. Previously his mother's grandfather, Daniel Bliss, was founder and first president of the University, and her father Howard Bliss, was the second president.

Mr. Dodge's early education was in Beirut and he graduated from Deerfield Academy and Princeton University. His first position was with the Government Relations Department of Aramco in both Saudi Arabia and New York. He spent 22 years in government relations for the Trans-Arabian Pipe Line Co. in Beirut. Following a two-year stint as president of the Near East Foundation, he returned to the American University of Beirut as vice-president for Administration, before becoming acting president. He is presently recording secretary of Princeton University.

Doris Westfall Dodge, while in Lebanon, was actively involved with helping Americans who were imprisoned.

Reservations for dinner at the Nassau Club with the Dodges at 6 p.m. may be made by calling Marcia Powell (466-9145).

Women and politics theme of club talk

The New Woman Candidate and the Woman's Vote will be the subject of a talk to be presented by Ruth B. Mandel, director of the Center for the American Woman and Politics, a unit of the Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers University, at the first meeting of the Women's College Club of Princeton. It will be held on Monday and 1:30 p.m. at All Saints' Church.

Ms. Mandel will present an objective look at the perils and rewards of running a political campaign, as well as some of the mistakes and successes of various candidates, in addition to commenting on the current political situation and the candidates.

A political analyst and observer of emerging trends in women's leadership, Ms. Mandel directs the center's work with women legislators. She has written and spoken widely about women as political candidates, officeholders, women's political networks, the "gender gap", and women and power. Her book, "In The Running — The New Woman Candidate," describes women's experiences campaigning for political office in recent years.

Princeton Borough Mayor Barbara Sigmund, a Democrat, will respond to Ms. Mandel's talk and answer questions. Linda Maiden, a Republican candidate for the Hopewell Township Committee, will also respond and answer questions.

Guests will be most welcome at this program. Those who wish to have luncheon with the speakers preceding the meeting should call Marcia Powell, (466-9145), or Elly de Boer, (921-1380).

Hostesses for the meeting include Jane Alexander, Mickey Eggers, Evelyn Henstock, Mary Turnbull, and Louie Spencer.

"The Japanese Challenge" will be the subject of a talk by Steven Schlossstein at a meeting of the Women's College Club of Princeton at 1:30 p.m. at All Saints' Church. For reservations, call 466-9145 or 921-1360.

College club to hear Schlossstein

"The Japanese Challenge" will be the subject of a talk to be presented by Steven Schlossstein at a meeting of the Women's College Club of Princeton Nov. 19 at 1:30 p.m. at All Saints' Church.

Mr. Schlossstein will discuss aboth Japanese culture and business, and their approach to advanced technology, including their impact upon the relationship between the United States and Japan. Because of his wide background and experience in this field, he will present fresh insights into the age of popularization of advanced technology.

Mr. Schlossstein's involvement with Japan and East Asia has spanned nearly two decades. A native Texan, he did graduate work in Japanese history and language at the University of Hawaii and at Tokyo University. After a period with Morgan Guaranty Trust's Far East department in New York, he became the bank's representative first in Hong Kong, and then in Tokyo, where he rose to become vice president.

A Princeton resident, he is now president of SBS Associates, Inc., financial consulting firm which specializes in assisting Japanese companies with direct investments in the American market. He has achieved national prominence as the author of two recent books.

Members who would like to meet Mr. Schlossstein at luncheon at the Nassau Club at noon preceding the meeting may make reservations with Marcia Powell (466-9145) or Elly de Boer (921-1360) before Nov. 16.

Bates to lecture on American Art

"From Medieval to Modern — The Interrelationship of Decorative American Art," will be the subject of a talk to be presented by Elizabeth Bidwell Bates at a meeting of the Women's College Club of Princeton. The meeting will be held at 1:30 p.m., Monday, Dec. 3 in All Saints Church on Van Dyke Road.

A consultant and lecturer on social history, Ms. Bates is the co-author of "American Furniture, 1620 to the Present." She divides her time between Princeton and New York where she consults on American antiques and decorations. Her talk will emphasize the influences on home decor, an appropriate subject as the holidays approach.

Members who wish to have luncheon with the speaker at the Nassau Club at noon preceding the program should contact Marcia Powell (466-9145) or Elly de Boer (921-1380) before Friday, Nov. 30.

College Club to hear sculptor Johnson

"Form and Content" will be the subject of a talk to be presented by J. Seward Johnson Jr. at a meeting of the Women's College Club of Princeton at All Saints' Church on Monday at 1:30 p.m.

In an age when so much of the art produced is not understood by the average person, Mr. Johnson is introducing his statements in the most easily read form — the human figure — and depicting narratives of universal appeal and significance. His figures engender humor, but their origin is a quiet acceptance of universal human conditions. These figures become part of their environments, silent participants in the lives of real people who share their space. They represent the most accessible of public art.

After a career as a painter with emphasis on impressionistic landscapes in oil, Mr. Johnson turned to sculpture about 15 years ago. He founded the stelier and sculpture casting foundry, a state-of-the-process installation that employs 140 assistants and students, and is one of the world's largest. His Washington-based Sculpture Placement organization put on 12 shows last year at urban plazas, resort hotels, corporate headquarters, and airports. Most Princeton residents are familiar with the realistic bronze figures that are part of the everyday life of the community.

Reservations for luncheon at the Nassau Club preceding the program may be made with Marcia Powell at 466-9145 or Elly de Boer at 921-1380.

Hostesses for the meeting will be Martha Baer, Delores Heiberger, Eleanor Park, Harriet Perrine, and Nellie Quick.

Our January Speaker

Printmaker's journey to Japan made an impression on her local exhibit

by Estelle Sinclaire

An unexpected eight-year sojourn in Tokyo may have broadened Princeton resident Margaret Johnson's career, but it certainly did not interrupt it.

In fact, her prints are in the Tochigi Prefectural Museum, and that she is one of only three foreigners ever elected to membership in Tokyo's Japan Print Association.

And meanwhile, back in the United States, the Full House Gallery in Kingston is exhibiting her intaglio reliefs, mesh reliefs, and metal embossments through March 16, and she has spoken about her experience in the Princeton Art Association's new Guggenheim Lecture Series.

BACK IN THE home that she and her husband, Edward, built in 1950, Margaret Johnson speaks of her experiences working among the Japanese, who found her just as intriguing as she found them. In fact, the experience could have been a daunting one, but for the fact that prior commitments forced her to find a studio, and left no time for qualms.

Margaret Johnson had agreed before leaving to contribute to the second Queenstown Press Bicentennial Portfolio, as she had to the first. "I had expected to have all summer to do it," she said.

Instead, she found herself uprooted along with her husband, who moved to Tokyo to direct RCA's electronics lab there.

"Once in Tokyo, I had to quickly find a studio and a press," Ms. Johnson said. "I was lucky that I had to work at once. Tokyo has so much to offer that otherwise I might never have gotten down to work.

"I was also lucky enough to have a wonderful week-long briefing at American University on the Japanese culture and Japanese people."

MS. JOHNSON was also lucky, she said, in the studio she found — even though it was an hour away from the Johnson apartment "by subway, foot, train, and foot again.

"A company that sold presses and supplies to printmakers had donated their top floor — and supplies — to serious young artists who had no studios. I took some prints along and showed them to their chief engineer, who was tremendously empathetic with printmakers.

" 'You may work here if you give me two prints before you leave,' he said. "We became good friends; later, he lent me presses for printmaking demonstrations."

The studio had drawbacks. Its top-floor heat kept Mrs. Johnson's ink loose, for instance. "Sometimes I was desperate," she says, until October brought cooler weather.

But the studio also provided young, talented friends fascinated by her work.

"I make intaglio prints," she says. "They're different from the sort of thing the Japanese make. Those young artists would crowd around my press. They were so curious that sometimes their heads would get between me and the plate."

A CONTINUING bond with the College Women's Association of Japan was also the result of luck. A gallery owner scheduled to lecture to the organization asked Margaret Johnson to do it instead.

She agreed on condition that she might interview Japanese printmakers. "The College Women's Association became my interpreters, and would make contacts with artist whose studios I wanted to visit.

"We became fast friends. And when I saw the tight little Japanese studios, I saw that I could have a press in the apartment."

More luck: a "terrific bargain on a wonderful press" from her studio-sponsoring friends. "They even measured my height."

Ms. Johnson's prints continued to fascinate the Japanese. She exhibited at the Japan Print Association at Tokyo's Metropolitan Museum, and annually in the College Women's Association show except when she was a committee member. With a young colleague, she wrote Japanese Prints Today — a book that is on its way to becoming a standard text. Articles about her appeared in Japanese publications.

HOW DID this eight-year immersion in Japan affect her work?

"I saw the serenity of [Japanese] architecture," Margaret Johnson writes, "and traditions such as the tea ceremony began to emerge in my work. Textures, too, were exciting. From the lichens growing on old monuments...to the turquoise patinas on ancient...vessels, I was struck by how very appealing those textures were."

Textures and patina re-emerge in Margaret Johnson's "Ancient Relics Series." Six of them are on view at Full House Gallery.

Ms. Johnson contributed an impression of of one of them, "Memory of Old Asia," to the PAA benefit last fall. It is a strong composition of turquoise whorls against ancient orange.

"Homage to Future Relics" is also an intaglio relief, but uses a rosier palette. Its ancient-looking subject is a familiar twentieth-century writer's tool — as it might look to a third-millennium archaeologist. Wine-lovers will recognize the worn cruciform subject of "Tomorrow's Memory."

Three of Margaret Johnson's metal embossments show the versatility of her silvery material.

"Discovery II" is brilliantly reflective. "Discovery I" and "Discovery III" have been darkened to absorb the li striking their intricate patterns.

Contrast comes from mirror-like rectangles in "Discovery I." In "Discovery III," lonely small scarlet coils — favored Johnson symbols — pit circularity against the background pattern of softened rectangles.

In five "Veils to the Future," fine-gauge mesh offers secrets for us to ponder. Its delicate relief appears in single and double lengths, folded, unfolded, crumpled. These shadow shapes approach immateriality.

Margaret Johnson is represented locally by Princeton Gallery of Fine Art, 8 Chambers Street.*

ISLAMIC ART IS TOPIC Of Club Meeting. The Women's College Club of Princeton will meet Monday at 1:30 p.m. at All Saints' Church, Van Dyke Road. Dr. Elizabeth S. Ettinghausen, Armour Road, will speak on "Islamic Art — Its Perception by East and West."

Born and educated in Vienna, Dr. Ettinghausen finished her studies in the history of art and archaeology in Istanbul, Turkey, where she received her Ph.D. After moving to this country, she was a fellow of Dumbarton Oaks, the Byzantine Institute of Harvard University, and Princeton University. She has arranged exhibitions for the US Information agency under the aegis of the Middle East Institute in Washington, D.C., for the Art Museum of Princeton University, and for the Museum in Aphrodisias, Turkey.

Dr. Ettinghausen has been a lecturer on art tours to various countries of the Middle East and North Africa sponsored by the Museum of Princeton University, the Smithsonian Institution, the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and the Asia Society of New York City. Since 1979 she has been a team member of the excavations at Aphrodisias, Turkey, under the auspices of New York University, and is presently preparing two catalogues of excavated material.

Reservations for luncheon at the Nassau Club preceding the program may be made before Friday, February 15, with Marcia Powell at 466-9145 or Elly de Boer at 921-1280.

OBITUARIES

THE WOMEN'S COLLEGE CLUB OF PRINCETON

HISTORIAN'S ANNUAL REPORT 1983-1984

It has been my job as Historian to keep the past records of the club. At present this consists of four cardboard boxes containing financial records, scholarship records, minutes of the Board meetings, Blue Slips, Directories, annual reports and Constitution information. They also contain information from the observance of our 50th Anniversary celebration. On several occasions I have retrieved from these records information that was needed by the Board.

In addition I keep a scrapbook of all publicity releases. This book will be displayed at the May luncheon.

Respectfully submitted,
